CAROL TO BECOME RUMANIAN KING

Today

Mr. Rockefeller Advises.

Mr. Ford Visits Mr. Curtis.

Brains, Money vs Babies.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright, 1930 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER lives quietly, plays golf, leaving men younger than 91 to run Standard Oil. But he keeps track of the world and when he advises he advises wisely. Much wisdom was condensed into the few words he said to a player in his foursome, "be deliberate" and "talk less and play better." That is a good "how to succeed" recipe.

HENRY FORD, GOING to visit Cyrus H. K. Curtis, arrives just in time to read an editorial published by Mr. Curtis, that will surprise Ford.

He says:

"Prohibition reform is going over." And, "Nothing can stop the growing intent of the people of the United States to preserve the good of the experiment, noble in motive, but to end its unexpected and unnecessary evils."

Henry Ford has said that if prohibition went and beer came back, he, Mr. Ford, would close his factories, because men with beer can't work fast enough to keep step with modern machinery.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis also owns modern, rapid machinery. He and Mr. Ford might have an interesting discussion, if they could get their minds off advertising.

YOUNG LADIES, graduating in a college for women, are urged by Rev. Dr. Robert Parrish to "be brains and money women."

We owe much of education, science and art to rich men, says the Doctor, and must not "despise wealth."

No tendency to despise wealth is visible in this country. But many still maintain that the "brain and money woman" is not as desirable as the "charm and baby woman."

THE BOY THAT INVESTED a dollar in a derby lottery and won $149,000, "split the money three ways." His brother got $35,000, he kept $35,000 and gave his father $79,000.

There was no quarrel. Each felt that he was getting about all the real money in the world.

Everything is comparative. Many men in the United States would call the total $149,000 "not worth thinking about."

BRITISH MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS abandon the attempt to conquer Kanchen-Junga, and transfer attention to another mountain in Asia called Jonsong, 24,300 feet high.

In proportion to size the Jonsong peak is not as high as one of the little rough spots on an orange.

Infra-microscopic creatures climbing such an orangee "peak" would equal the achievement of any human climbers. We climb or fly up, less than one-thousandth part of the earth's diameter, and praise ourselves.

GEN. ATTERBURY, head of the Pennsylvania Railroad plans a Chicago to New York train to make the run in 14 hours, doing 90 miles an hour by electric power.

If Pennsylvania engineers have planned it, the thing will be done undoubtedly.

Airships will make the run in three hours before very long, and a slight change in transportation methods might bring on the earth's surface a speed of 150 or 200 miles an hour.

STEEL FALLS $2.87 SHARE

Ticker in Arrears in Stock Market Rush.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 7—Stock prices were sharply depressed in today's abbreviated session of the New York stock exchange, as the persistent bear campaign which has been in progress during the greater part of the week finally dislodged a large volume of stock from the hands of discouraged holders.

Several issues broke through the low levels of early May, and recorded new minimum levels for the year, notably U. S. Steel, which closed at $164.25, off $2.87. This compares with a previous 1930 low of $165.75, and a bottom last November at $150. A wide assortment of shares lost from $3 to more than $10.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Large scale liquidation poured into the stock market at the opening today, depressing leading shares from $1 to $5, and sending U. S. Steel common down more than $2 to a new low for the year. The ticker soon fell several minutes in arrears.

Professional short selling was said in brokerage circles to be in large volume, but rather widespread liquidation of stocks by holders having grown discouraged with the colorless character of the business news, and the inability of the market to make upward progress, was also heavy.

N. CAROLINA GOES TO POLLS

By The Associated Press.

RALEIGH, N. C., June 7.—Josiah W. Bailey's attempt to wrest the Democratic senatorial nomination from the veteran Senator Frunifold M. Simmons, dominated interest in today's primaries.

Predictions were that the vote would be the heaviest ever cast in a Democratic primary not held in a presidential year. The senatorial contest is a throw back from the 1928 election in which Senator Simmons refused to support Alferd E. Smith, the party's nominee for president. Bailey backed the New Yorker and made his bid for the nomination on the platform of "party regularity," denying that he was attempting to punish Simmons.

FORMER CROWN PRINCE GOES TO BUCHAREST

One-time Exile Will Be Proclaimed Tonight.

CAPITAL QUIET

Youthful Michael Will Be Placed in Nursery.

By The Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 7—It has been decided that former Crown Price Carol, who made a dramatic return to Bucharest by airplane from exile yesterday, is to be proclaimed king of Rumania tonight.

The proclaiming of the former Crown Price Carol as king of Rumania will remove from the list of European kings its youngest member, little King Michael, who ascended the throne on July 20, 1927, when he was not quite 6 years old.

King Michael, or "Mickey" as he was known by his young friends in the days before he became king, was not to have actually ruled Rumania until he became of age. A board of regency, one member of which was his uncle, Prince Nicholas, acted in his stead and he only made his appearance as king on formal occasions.

He is the hero of many childish exploits having to do with sports and his love of outdoor life.

Reported on Throne.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, June 7. — Unofficial reports were received in Paris today that former Crown Prince Carol has been proclaimed king of Rumania by the Rumanian assembly. (Advices from Bucharest said that Carol would be proclaimed at 6 o'clock tonight, or 11 a. m. E. S. T.).

The reports were received sympathetically in semi-official circles where it was said that even if he had not already been proclaimed, the ceremony would not be long delayed.

Private advices reaching Paris from Bucharest indicated that the Liberal party, which has been opposed to him, had decided to accept Carol as king rather than risk civil war.

It is understood that the youthful King Michael will be placed in a nursery and that Carol would be given an opportunity to show whether he intends to be a good king, having left his indiscretions behind him.

Dramatic Return.

LE BOURGET, France, June 7.—Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, who returned to his native land yesterday by airplane was picked up at a secret rendezvous "somewhere in France" by a French pilot.

The pilot was Jean La Louette

MAN AND WIFE DIE IN CRASH

Canton Auto Wrecked On Crossing Near Orrville.

By The Associated Press.

ORRVILLE, O., June 7. — John Schubach, 53, president of the Sanitary Milk company, Canton, and his wife, Pearl, 46, were killed instantly at 1 a. m. today when their automobile crashed into a fast northbound freight on the Cleveland, Akron & Columbus railroad at an unprotected grade crossing four miles northeast here.

The train did not stop after the accident and it is believed that the crew was unaware of the mishap. Schubach's car was not turned over and only damaged on the right front side.

The road goes up an incline and then down to the crossing. It is believed that Schubach, driving east, did not see the train until a few feet from it. Position of the car indicated that he attempted to swerve the automobile into the ditch to avoid the collision.

Queen is Pleased At Carol's Welcome

VIENNA, June 7—Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania received first news of the arrival of her son, former Crown Prince Carol, in Bucharest from the Rumanian minister who met her at the Vienna railway station where she stopped enroute to Oberammergau.

LIVING COSTS ARE CLIMBING IN PORTUGAL

Tariff Walls Boosting Commodity Prices.

NEW LAWS MADE

Financiers Attempt to Bolster Dying Industries.

By The Associated Press.

LISBON, Portugal, June 8. — Surrounded by high tariff walls, Portugal may become one of the most expensive countries in Europe.

Import duties on so many items have been increased that the cost of living, already high, threatens to continue its upward trend.

The new tariff, which went into effect January 6, is the work of the minister of finance, Dr. Antonio Oliveira Salazar.

It is a compromise between protection and free trade. High duties are imposed on goods that Portugal produces. Foodstuffs are taxed lightly. The minister of finance held the reform was indespensable for the protection of dying home industries and to end dumping of foreign goods which drove national goods from the local market.

Important revenue, it is declared, will accrue to the treasury by the application of the new tariff. The Portuguese government derives 40 percent of its income from the customs. These in 1929 yielded $70,000,000, and revenue for the present financial year is expected to be considerably higher.

While the new customs convention is greeted in many quarters with relief, cries of alarm are raised by the luxury trade which felt effects of the New York stock market slump last fall and the drop in the prices of commodities.

Newspaper publishers say the paper they must import carries too high a duty, imported butter, chocolates, tea, soaps, perfumery and silk material have become high priced. Increases have been levied upon perfumes, motor cars, tires, gasoline and oils.

SHE SEEKS FREEDOM

Despite the fact that Clara Phillips, once known as the "tiger woman" and the "hammer murderess" has spent seven years behind the bars in San Quentin, she has not given up thoughts of freedom. She expects to apply to Gov. C. C. Young for pardon within the next few days.

THE PREVAILING PATTERN

Isn't this a cunning little rig for a smart little miss? The cleverly shaped yoke is most becoming and the inverted pleats afford freedom as well as grace. The frock is sleeveless, but the shoulders are cut to cover the arm a bit. Tiny pearl buttons form attractive trimming.

Design 1882 may be made of printed gingham, percale, dimity, pique, voile, etc. The yoke may be made of the same fabric, or may be of contrasting color as in the sketch. Narrow lace or embroidery gives a dainty finish.

This pattern may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 2 requires 2⅛ yards of 36 inch material and 3 yards of lace.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our PATTERN BOOK of NEW SPRING and SUMMER STYLES is FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to Pattern Department, 243 West 17th St., New York City.

Murder At High Tide

Pulsating Story of Revenge and Romance . . . By CHARLES G. BOOTH

CHAPTR 20 ETAOIN SHR W...

SYNOPSIS: Still another "blind alley" blocks the search for the murderer of Dan Parados! A maid tells of a quarrel between Parados and Professor Johns, custodian of the island fort. Johns explains the argument was caused by Parados' intention to tear down the fort, much against Johns' wishes. He admits hating Parados, but his alibi sounds plausible. Samuels, deputy attorney, is inclined to place confidence in surface evidence. More subtle clews, on the other hand, attract Anatole Flique, clever French detective. Flique, decides to investigate Lum We, the Chinese cook, who is suspected of stealing a jade phoenix, Parados' symbol of luck.

A DEVIL INHABITS LUM WE

Chapter 20.

MY inclination was to find Caroline, but a sense of duty kept me at Flique's side.

"I thought you wanted to see Lum We," I said, as he proceeded up the hall.

"It is a private matter, this, M. l'Antiquaire," Flique informed me. "We shall call on Lum We at his chamber over the garage. It was the kitchen door you found open this morning, yes?"

I nodded.

"Is it your belief that Lum We left it open?" I inquired. "I mean, do you thing he stole and broke and returned the phoenix because Parados wouldn't let him burn incense to his ancestors?"

Flique shrugged. There is a mystery here, my friend. Perhaps this Lum We is the guilty one—I do not know."

As we rounded the corner of the house and proceeded along the cinder walk to the two-story building that served as garage and servents' quarters, Grainger appeared from behind a hedge, a pair of clippers in his hands. Flique hailed him.

"We seek the chamber of Lum We, my good Grainger," Flique announced blandly. "Will you reveal it to us?"

Grainger gave him a long, hard look.

"It's in the north room, sir. He's got his name over it in Chinese. You go up that outside stair. But he keeps it locked, sir."

"Because it is the temple of the spirit of his ancestor?" Flique inquired.

"And you have the queerness, also, my Grainger!" Flique retorted briskly. "Come, tell us why monsieur slashed you with his riding whip. Ah, well, it does not matter. Your reason—it is in your eyes."

With this cryptic remark Flique seized my arm and led me to the outside stair of the garage. Grainger stared after us.

A white card with Chinese ideograms printed on it was tacked above one door off the landing. It was locked, as Grainger had said, and Flique took out a bunch of queer-looking keys. One of them fit and we entered.

It was a square, bare interior with whitewashed walls. A cot stood against one wall, near it a chair and table; an old-fashioned brass-bound trunk and a rickety bureau comprised the other furnishings. The atmosphere was heavy with fumes of incense.

Flique darted toward the bureau and picked up a square block of wood—teak, I though—which appeared to have been the base of some object that had been destroyed. A round hole was bored in the block and out of it protruded splinters of a lighter variety of wood In front of where the block had stood was a small, metal bowl, with a deposit of armomatic ashes in the bottom of it.

"Did I not tell you it was the temple of the spirit of his ancestor?" Flique demanded triumphantly.

"His ancestral tablet," I muttered. "All that's left of it." I was pretty sure now what had happened to the tablet.

"Mais oue," Flique continued volubly. And it is broken. But what is this?"

A black, oblong box of fine Chinese lacquer lay on the bureau behind where the block had stood. The box was locked, but Flique, despite my protest, soon opened it with a piece of wire.

"Monsieur Watson must pocket his scruple," he informed me. "Look!"

The box was filled with broken pieces of wood similar to those sticking out of the hole in the teak block.

"They can cut "The Destroyer" on Parados' tombstone—that's the epitaph he's earned," I said. "He did his best to spoil every decent thing he got his hands on."

"It is broken," Flique murmured gently, "but Lum We still burns the incense to the soul of his ancestor."

"I'd bet Parados made Lum We watch him do it, too," I declared vehemently. "No wonder Lum We broke his god and shot him."

"Ah, you think that, M. l'Antiquaire?"

"You mean he didn't?"

"We have solved one of our little mysteries—that is all," he said. "Lum We stole the phoenix and broke it—that we know. Perhaps he killed monsieur—but that we do not know."

Before I could reply a slight noise fell on my ear and I swung around. I was just in time. Lum We was hurtling out of the doorway, a butcher knife in his hand. His eyes were green and his objective was Flique's plump shoulders.

I hit him on the chin with a powerful right drive and he dropped at my feet. He was no bigger than a boy.

"Thank you, my friend," Flique gasped. "My little victory made me forget that he would come. It would have been most disagreeable, that knife."

"Grainger must have told him," I said.

"Did I not intend him to?" Flique inquired.

"You wanted him to commit himself—is that it?" I exclaimed. "Well, he's done so. Do you still believe he did not kill Parados?"

"And why should I change my mind?" Flique inquired, flinging out his hands. "The murder was—um — premeditated. This would have been the crime of passion There is a difference. But here is M. Samuel."

The deputy entered the room.

"What's all this?" he demanded.

Flique showed him the remains of the ancestral tablet and explained what had happened.

"And so," Flique finished, "had it not been for the good right arm of M. l'Antiquaire you would have had another trouble on your hand."

"I saw him streaking across the lawn with that knife," Samuels muttered. "Get up!" He prodded Lum We in the ribs. The Chinaman climbed slowly to his feet, blinking in the sunlight.

"What have you got to say for yourself?" Samuels demanded sternly.

Apparently Samuels was convinced that Lum We had killed his master.

Lum We bowed. "I am profoundly regretful, Mr. Samuels," he said, guileless of tone and expression. "I beseech the forgiveness of Mr. Flique and to Mr. Hunt I extend my admiration.

"Why did you attack Flique?"

"The hut of a poor man is the temple of his ancestors," he explained.

"You objected to him being here?"

"M. Flique perfumes the air with his goodness," Lum We continued, and his eyes came to rest uneasily on the lacquer box, "but the spirit of my father has walked on slender swords—and a devil invaded me—"

"Who broke your ancestral tablet?" Samuels interrupted.

"Mr. Parados," Lum We replied.

"Because you burned incense to your father's spirit, when he had forbidden you to?"

Lum We bowed. "Mr. Samuels has dipped his tongue in the ointment of understanding."

"So you stole the phoenix?"

"It was his god," Lum We said simply, "and he had polluted the spirit of my father."

"You broke it and returned it?"

"He had extinguished the tablet of my father's spirit."

Samuels leaped forward and caught Lum We by the wrists.

"You stole the phoenix—you killed Parados; then you got scared and returned the phoenix broken. You might as well come through."

Metal flashed in the sunlight and Lum We was handcuffed. Flique was smiling ironically.

Lum We retained his composure.

"Mr. Samuels is perpetrating an error," he observed blandly. "I did not exterminate Mr. Parados. He put a devil in me, but I contented it with breaking his god. That was enough." Lum We stated his philosophy in those three words.

Samuels had dragged the Chinaman nearly to the door when Flique spoke.

"M. le Deputy, you are certain this man killed monsieur?"

"You've heard his story haven't you?" Samuels demanded wrathfully. "He tried to take your life and he's admitted that he stole and broke the phoenix. What more do you want?"

(Copyright, 1930, William Morrow and Company).

CLEVELANDER AIDS STUDENTS IN ART CAREER

Frances Sadlier Encourages Future Prima Donnas.

HEADS SCHOOL

Costs Nothing to Learn At Foundation.

By The Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., June 7.—This middle western metropolis may become the "Naples of the United States"—a sort of paradise in which Ohioans, with the urge to express themselves, may be given their opportunity to study and sing the operas of the Old World at little cost.

And if this delightful possibility of creating "art for art's sake" becomes an actuality, the owners of the voices thus developed and recognized will have the Cleveland Civic Foundation to thank. The man behind the movement to aid Ohioans in scaling the ladder of operatic achievement is Francis J. Sadlier, general director of the Foundation.

"Numerous singers throughout the state have spent years in the cultivation of their voices with the hope that some day they might sing on the stage remaining forever vague and unrealized," says Mr. Sadlier, a kindly man, who knows the frustrations of artistically inclined individuals in a machine age and laments them.

Mr. Sadlier points to Europen municipalities, which, he says, cultivates such talents, and give to them inexpensive outlets.

And Mr. Sadlier is right!

This much world travellers tell their friends "back home" in Ohio when they return from their globe girdling jaunts.

Italy and Spain are particularly inclined toward classical music. Perhaps, they state with their tongues in their cheeks, it is the climate and the environment, linked with centuries of tradition and inherent dramatic instinct—which instinctively recite the sages of the nation in poetry and in ballad rather than in prose and monotone.

They venture the suggestion that Sicillian skies and Neapolitan hillscapes, dotted with clouds not dissimilar in appearance from powder puffs in blue vanity cases, have taught the Latins their littany of music hen the race as young—and the latins never have forgotten.

Practically every Italian and Spanish village has a fete, annually, in which humble citizens become prima donnas for a day—sweeping away the cares of wine shops, bakeries and cobblers shops for the moment with bouyant music—a fantastic, physchological broom.

But Ohioans have come from all the countries of the world, Mr. Sadlier answers, and their dramatic instincts must also be expressed. Many of them possess voices, he is certain, which, if sufficiently cultivated and encouraged, are the equals of the tenors, contraltos and sopranos who thrill the crowds in New York's "Diamond Horseshoe."

To this end, then, cease lessly, the Cleveland Civic Foundation must. It is doing so now.

The foundation, regardless of the singer's particular school or teacher, submits him to a test and if he passes it, he is permitted to perform.

The Opera company of the Foundation now contains a chorus of eighty-five voices and a ballet of forty dancers. It has presented such operas as the "Wizard of the Nile," the "Beggar Student," the "Bohemian Girl" and "Chimes of Normandie."

The opportunity is extended ambitious men and women without cost.

There is spirited competition for the leading roles. Each singer has the opportunity to try for such a part.

Here enters something sufficiently democratic to establish the Cleveland Foundation operas as democratic and typically American.

After the glitter of performing a "lead," the fortunate individual goes back to the chorus, with only he memory of the "grand night" to console him—for no pay is given for the performance.

SAFETY has for 30 years been the biggest advantage of investing savings in the stock of this association, but the liberal dividends—6%—have also been a big factor in the association's GROWTH. At 4%, $1000.00 earns about $40.00 annually; at 6% it earns $60.00—an important difference.

Safeguarding Play

Thanks to the efforts of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, sponsors of the supervised recreation movement, the excuse for play in the streets will be eliminated next Tuesday when the municipal playground will open for the summer season.

With J. A. Monasky, supervisor, and Miss Irma Jones, his assistant, in charge, the play center will be open from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily except Saturday when the closing hour will be 6 p. m. Since Patterson field is now available for older children, boys and girls under 14 years of age will be urged to take advantage of the facilities at the Washington and Second streets' lot.

The program outlined by the club women and the supervisors provides for wholesome outdoor exercises for all children, with hikes interspersing the schedule of games. As an additional feature, girls will be taught handicraft.

If children accept the privileges made possible by the generosity of the public which supports the annual playground campaigns, there should be a decrease in traffic accidents in East Liverpool during June, July and August, for no small number of the injured during the vacation period are school pupils who are unmindful of the danger of playing in the streets and highways.

Boys and girls, use your playground!

Automobile Deaths Mounting

Some surprise was occastoned in Washington when the war department issued a bulletin presenting figures to show that the casualties suffered by the United States during the World war were not so heavy as those caused by automobiles in time of peace. The bulletin was such a departure from the ordinary as to cause speculation regarding the purpose of the department in issuing it; some were inclined toward the opinion that the department was engaged in propagandizing in favor of stricter traffic control.

Inquiry developed the fact that figures similar to those given out in Washington, which applied to the District of Columbia only, had been sent to all the states to show that the horrors of war, so far as casualties were concerned, were less than those resulting from the use of motor vehicles in time of peace.

During the World war there was an average of 5.4 deaths monthly among those from the District of Columbia who entered the army, while the automobile is exacting an average of 9.6 deaths a month in peace time. While these district figures given out by the war department are misleading, for the reason that the number of men from the district at the front or in camps here at home was small compared with the total population, they will serve a good purpose if they call attention to the constant-rising number of victims of motor cars.

It is something of a coincidence that the same day the department gave out its figures, returns from seventy-eight large cities of the United States showed 605 automobile deaths during the four weeks ended April 19 of the present year, as compared with 526 deaths for the four weeks ended April 20, 1929; while for the fifty-two weeks ended April 19 of this year the deaths numbered 8,675, compared with 7,657 deaths during the fifty-weeks ended April 20 in 1929, giving a death rate of 26.4 to 100,000 against a death rate of 23.3 to the same population during the similiar period the year before. This represents an increase of thirteen per cent during the fifty-two weeks.

In New York City alone there were ninety-four automobile deaths in the four-week period ended April 19 this year, against eighty-seven in the like period ended April 20 last year, while the total automobile death toll in that city during the fifty-two weeks ended the day before Easter this year were 1,349, compared with 1,081 during the fifty-two weeks ended April 20, 1929.

Although it is true that we have had frequent reports of deaths due to motor cars daily from all parts of the country, they have not impressed the public as did the massed figures showing our casualties in the World war. But when the war department shows that the deaths from the automobile in time of peace greatly outnumber, in monthly average, the casualties of war, it may have the effect of so riveting public attention to the awful peace-time record that some benefit will result.

Owen D. Young's plea for funds to erect a new building at St. Lawrence university has been recorded on a phonograph record for distribution. That's one sales talk that can be shut off when the pies start to burn out in the kitchen.

Russia Will Advertise

It is reported from Soviet Russia that an advertising counterpart of the Mississippi showboat is to be used by that nation this summer to disseminate information on life under its government. This unique "culture" craft would visit all the important ports of Europe, where it would be thrown open to the public for inspection. Samples of Soviet art, music, singing and ballet dancing would be available, presumably at no charge.

This is an interesting idea and so far in advance of the silly and hateful pictings of the Third Internationale and the foolhardy danger of Communist parades that it can be commended heartily. If Soviet Russia has something to offer, a good will exposition is certainly a more logical advertising scheme than the deliberate incurrence of cracked heads and wounded feelings.

The United States, retaining clear images of Edna Ferber's novel, and the musical play and moving picture based on it, receives the project with little concern over the possibilities it offers of popularizing Russia culture. Disregarding the evident truth that Russian government could not possibly be bad enough to destroy Russian ability, what petty prejudice could last through a theme song as good as "The Volga Boatman" and a Russian ballet?

If a dinner were served as a modern newspaper is publised, it would begin at 11 o'clock with a few light dishes to satisfy those persons who are too hungry to wait for the regular meal hour. About 11:30 o'clock the day's groceries would begin to arrive and the cook would prepare them for the table.

At noon most of the breakfast scraps would be cleared away to be replaced by a chicken, potatoes and canned tomatoes. Just then the grocer would call in to say that he had received a beautiful fish and the cook and housewife would agree that the fish sounds better than the chicken and decide to remove the chicken in favor of the fish. Report of the discovery of a bunch of asparagus in the garden would eliminate the canned tomatoes for asparagus. About this time the potatoes would grow cold and they would be snatched from the table to be warmed and have hot butter poured over them.

But when at 1 o'clock the grocer sends over a dozen lamb chops unexpectedly, the fish would go by the board while the cook and housewife make a place on the table for the chops. However, as there are some people who like fish, they relegate it to a side table, though it probably will escape notice there. And in order that they may cater to every taste they prepare a few side dishes of caviar on toast, pickled pig knckles and sauerkraut, Hungarian goulash and shepherd's pie, though they do not, of course, expect everyone to eat all of it.

At 2 o'clock the potatoes would yield place to a hot corn pudding and the asparagus make way for string beans. At 3 o'clock the usual salads would begin to appear and at 4 o'clock the first dessert, a custard pie. Between 4 and 6 o'clock calf-foot jelly, blancmange, blackberry roly-poly and stewed rhubard would grace the table, while the heavy dishes would be secreted in various corners of the dining room. Everything would now be got ready for the freezing of the ice-cream.

At 6:30 o'clock the cook would send a flash from the kitchen announcing "ice-cream frozen" and would then rush to place it on the table, while the housewife shouted "Dinner complete." And those who respond to the call would ask themselves if this could possibly be the same dinner they sat down to at 11 a. m., and complain that they can never find the food they want.—The Baltimore Sun.

HOWE AND NOTED OHIO MEN IN 1848

For The Associated Press.

By J. H. Galbraith.

Henry Howe, the Ohio historian, prized highly the opportunity he had of meeting in his tour of the state in 1848 many of the noted men of that day and younger men whom he lived to see taking high places in the state and nation, and wrote an interesting story about these incidents. At Cincinnati he met Judge Jacob Burnet, whose notes on early history of that period are an original source for much of the history of that period. Judge Burnet was then 76 years old. He walked with a stick and wore his hair in a queue, a ruffled shirt and presumably, knee breeches. At Marietta he met Dr. Hildreth, another Ohio writer of history. He was then 69, an ideal family physician. Caleb Atwater he saw at Circleville, 68, large and heavy, who talked as though merely thinking aloud. Wooed from his profession of law by his love of archaeology, he had not prospered and struck Mr. Howe as a disappointed old man. At the same place he saw E. H. Davis and E. G. Squier, the archaeologists. Squier was restless and aggressive; Davis methodical and cautious. The former, Howe was not surprised to hear, had later been placed in an institution for the insane.

He met and talked with Thomas Ewing, Thomas Corgin and William Allen. He remembered to have met in the office of the Cleveland Herald George Hoadly, then quite young, but so interested in politics as to attract the historian's attention. Later he became Governor Hoadly. While making some sketches of the buildings of Ohio university at Athens he saw S. S. Cox for the first time. A young student at Athens then, he was looking over Howe's shoulders as he drew the sketches.

At Cincinnati he also met Alphonso Taft, who became his friend for life. At Lower Sandusky, now Fremont, a young man who showed him about and gave him tips to important persons to see there proved to be Rutherford B. Hayes. Traveling over a new railroad along the lake shore, he found himself obliged to ride in a Jim Crow car—part baggage and part smoker, and entered into an interesting converation with a tall young man who occupied half the seat, about political matters, and found at the end of the journey that his traveling companno was John Sherman.

MORE OVERPRODUCTION.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 7.—New York has a number of conspicuous examples of great actresses who were on Broadway but not a part of its tenuous texture. Almost invariably these shrinking violets have symbolized the best moral forces on the legitimate stage and the screen.

Perhaps the outstanding figure of all the self-effacing guild is Maud Adams. She has never attended a Broadway party or was she ever seen in one of those brilliantly lighted cafes dubbed "smart." Her life has been and is now one of sombre attenuations.

Miss Adams had what might be termed an aesthetic admiration for her public but never mingled with it. To this day she has not been interviewed more than a dozen times. And she is said to be personally acquainted with only two of the dramatic reviewers.

Genevieve and Vivian Tobin are proverbial hot-house flowers, reared in the gentle culture of carefully planned homes. Each is a star in her own right. Their engagement problems have been solely of selection. Almost every producer would jump at the chance to present them.

The former Lorraine Manville, who following her marriage to Clare Gould, a handsome leading man, immediately withdrew from the stage. She was educated in the finest schools both here and aboard, after which she chose a footlight career and triumphed. But her life has always been cloistered.

Lillian Gish, with eyes as limpid as clear water, yet incalculably remote, contributed the same aloof quality to the screen. Neither Hollywood nor Broadway knows her save through her art. She attends the theater at intervals with George Jean Nathan, sitting in mouse-like obscurity among glittering notables about her.

Elsie Janis is a trifle more democratic in her contacts, but rarely attends a gathering without her mother. These attitudes of isolation have not alienated stars from the public but proved again distance lends enchantment. All are unusualy well beloved.

Only one dramatic critic—Robert Benchley—is ever heard laughing right out loud at the theater. And his giggle can start the whole house guffawing.

A tiny shop on Fulton street conceived the bright notion of holding a dollar sale—any article for that price. All the windows were broken, 15 were injured, the interior wrecked and a native of one of those towns with a wild Jersey name swallowed his false teeth.

Jack Donahue is another actor who has gone literary. Recently there arrived at a magazine editor's desk a screed entitled "The letters of a hoofer to his mother." It bore Donahue's name and the editor and two assistants began running around smashing plates in wild hysteria. The author was telegraphed for to sign on the dotted line.

Donahue's magazine click is another answer to uppities who sneer only writers "with a name" have a chance in magazine shops. His manuscript was without an identifying letter and the author was not known to be the actor until he called.

It was believed Gene Tunney would, upon his retirement from the ring, turn to writing. However, five leading magazines have been angling for him and have received only polite but firm refusals. No one has been able to anticipate Tunney. He continues to be an enigma in public as naive as a country girl meeting Rudy Vallee.

"Of course," says a writer in the London Express, "New York is a staggering city, always interesting and entertaining. But what has it that is absolutely ideal?"

Well, there's a certain columnist, you big tease, you!

An important gentleman asked me recently for some information. I called at his office yesterday to favor him. A cuff shooting secretary with a mirror complex informed me with slight arriere pensee the great man could not be disturbed. I don't mind the nabob's snub but I do mind the loss of sleep in staying awake all night writing him dirty letters, the big cheese.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

IT is surprising and encouraging how much health propaganda we see and hear these days. From the newspapers, on the radio, in the pulpit, go admonitions to all for right living.

Health has positive qualities. "Health is wealth." Health certainly is wisdom! Health is a condition of well-being, of buoyant life and vitality and no one can afford to neglect it.

The value of proper living lies in promoting better health, and these are no mere words. We just have to live properly in order to maintain good health.

The summer is an excellent time to get one's self in good shape for the winter, when cold mists blow in from the sea, and chill east winds howl down the chimneys. Sudden changes of temperature in the autumn days bring rainy weather and wet feet after balmy days when light clothing is the vogue. Colds dispose us to easy infection if we have not built for health in the meantime.

Every one should build up resistance to disease, to sudden weather changes by good, vigorous exercise every day in the out-of-doors and sunshine. You can do it, and I can do it, no matter where we are. It just takes perseverance and stick-to-itiveness.

These preventive measures for health mean constant habits of right living. It does not mean too long a tramp one day, and none the next. Overindulgence in food or drink one night, and none the next. When we once have health, we must keep it.

Our doctors will help and do help immeasurably. But our fates are surely in our own hands. No physician can promise to cure every ailment we have, but he can help in preventing it.

Having a thorough physical examination at least once a year is not an entirely new idea. Thousands pursue this course every year, with the result that health promotion and the prevention of disease are intelligently conducted affairs. Your doctor, consulted in time, prevents many an ailment that you may never know of. By consulting him you are conserving your health, and also you are in line to be cured of any incipient disease which may be lurking in the background.

This matter of consulting your family doctor in order to conserve your own health and your family's health does another thing. In the case of a patient who finds upon examination that he has some incurable physical defect, he is able to take better care of himself, and worries less under the guiding hand of his physician than he possibly could when "lurking in the shadows of the morbidly unseen."

The moral of this is, see your family doctor often for his counsel and a physical examination, and so conserve your good health. Make yourself physically fit by an out-of-doors life during the long summer days. The conservation of health is "up to you."

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES

DAYS when the fire department used horses for transporting the trucks and engines to fires come to the mind of Captain John Rhue, retired, on occasions. He recalls with a great deal of interest when there were 13 horses belonging to the city and utilized in the various stations. It was the custom to use three horses on one of the fire fighting vehicles that went out from the Central station.

Runs to fires in those days were not only exciting to the firemen and the horses but each expedition from the various headquarters ever arrested the attention of the public. People stop to view the motor apparatus now used when calls are answered. But despite the rush of it all there is something lacking in the absence of the horses.

And there is even a dullness about the departments when the men are relaxing and awaiting an alarm. To quote Captain Rhue: "There is no life in machinery. But the horses served to make a bond between them and the firemen at all times. They even let us know when it was time to feed them by the stamping of their feet."

He relates how there was almost a constant necessity for doing something for the horses. The doing of all these served to train them to greater efficiency.

Having been stationed for years upon the Northside Captain Rhue notes the difficulties that attended the getting of the trucks down the steep St. Clair hill on days when snow and sleet were in evidence. At times when only the surface of the brick served to be passed over, one of the horses would occasionally slip and fall. There was the need for constant care to save the outfit and prevent the animal from being injured.

One of the fire trucks used from the hilltop had five wheels on it. It would be necessary occasionally to put chains on one of the rear ones. This would slip at intervals which added to the trouble he and his associates had in making their objectives.

THEN there was the problem of horses attached to the stations experiencing interims in which they would "buck." He recalls one of the last horses that belonged to the Northside unit which was given to this shortcoming. It usually performed this stunt just at the turn at the foot of the hill as they would be passing Walnut street.

He noted that the late Fire Chief McCullough, a skilled horseman, happened to be at the Northside one day. When an alarm came in he did the driving down the hill. And when the Walnut corner was reached the horse, true to its past form, went into neutral or whatever a horse does when it stops and refuses to go farther notwithstanding the fact that he was headed for a fire.

Chief McCullough used a long whip, and by a certain manipulating of his reins which enabled the horse to lurch forward only to have him suddenly draw him back on his haunches, effected a speedy cure. After just a brief session with this horse it changed its ways. Ever thereafter the horse made the turn at this point like all of the others who were being used by the department.

Captain Rhue maintained that Chief McCullough was a most capable man with horses. In his day he did much to develop the horses to the form that they later showed. He agrees that work in a fire department is perhaps easier and more efficient by the motor system. But he also feels that something went out of the department with the passing of the horses.

The recent cold weather in May in and about East Liverpool rather reminds Captain Rhue of the kind of low atmosphere that he found in Texas during the winter months last year. He did not find snow and sleet to any great degree but there was a temperature that resembled the cool of the May days.

Its presence served to recall that Memorial day a few years before the World war, when the mercury dropped to a point like that of the 1930 day. It was necessary for men to wear overcoats and the women their warmest wraps. The exercises at Riverview cemetery that day were held in the morning. Charles Dick, of Akron, then one of the United States senators, was the speaker. In recent years he returned to the same cemetery to mingle with his Spanish-American war comrades. Then it was a hot day.

READING the famous Gettysburg speech by Abraham Lincoln from memory at the Riverview Memorial day service, Rev. C. L. Loney, assistant pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, fitte dwell into the setting of the occasion in that he is himself a native of the state in which the author was born.

It has thus been the privilege of Rev. Loney to often visit the tomb of Lincoln at Springfield, Ill. The traditions of the city in which the Great Emancipator lived are thus known to him in a peculiar way. It was thus to quote from the address itself "altogether fitting" that he should handle that part of the day's program.

And this address which with the days grows in the intensity of its affirmations and marvelous diction is composed of but 270 words. And of this number the letter "A" used as a word is found four times. The two-letter word "we" is noted nine times in it, the two-letter "so" twice. A perusal of the masterpiece reveals the marked number of two, three and four syllables.

Perhaps the longest words in the address are "proposition" and "consecrated," each of four syllables and 11 letters. Lincoln's style no doubt came largely from his habit of Bible reading.

People heard again this marvelous address that day in every corner and recess of the nation. Those not at meetings in the open or halls where it was read heard it over the radio. And its interest holds, grows with the years in its arresting sentiments.

With the passing of Memorial day the next parriotic observance by the nation will be "Flag day" on June 14. The placing in public places upon, before and beside buildings, dwellings and other points of vantage of the Stars and Stripes is meant to signify that the American emblem will be 163 years old upon that occasion. Though the United States is regarded as a young country, yet its flag is perhaps among the oldest of the countries of the world at this time.

OLD Glory has maintained its makeup, appearance and traditions more than a century and a half. Before the Constitution was formulated and while the country was in the midst of war for independence, the then United States congress passed a resolution declaring that "the flag of the United States be stripes alternating red and white; that the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing the constillation."

On April 4, 1818, just 112 years ago congress decided that a new star should be added for each new state admitted into the Union. In addition to the doctrine that has become known internationally by his name, this singular departure in the nation's flag took place in the administration of James Monroe of Virginia.

The flag by now carries the stars of the 48 states in the Union. Twenty-five have been added to the original thirteen. But the thirteen stripes that first went into its makeup remain the same in glorified adulation of those commonwealths that originally formed the Republic.

And the beauty of the flag stands out everywhere. It is small wonder that Americans traveling in a foreign clime at times weep when approaching a harbor in which there may be craft of all nations. They are thrilled to tears by observing the Stars and Stripes waving in the breeze. Many have been heartened by the spectacle. There can be no estimate of the renewed confidence in life that the emblem has given from time to time wherever it may be unfurled, at home or aboard.

There have been some intriguing spectacles of Old Glory in recent days in East Liverpool. During the recent American Legion rally and the Memorial day observation the flag stood out as perhaps never before from the tops of the city's highest buildings.

That on the postoffice had an appealing advantage; the one of the large iron pole on the city lot was equally appealing. The two on the east and west tops of the new fire station with those on busines buildings that were higher functioned as intended. They suggested the instinctive sentiment; "Long may it wave oer the land of the free and the home of the brave."

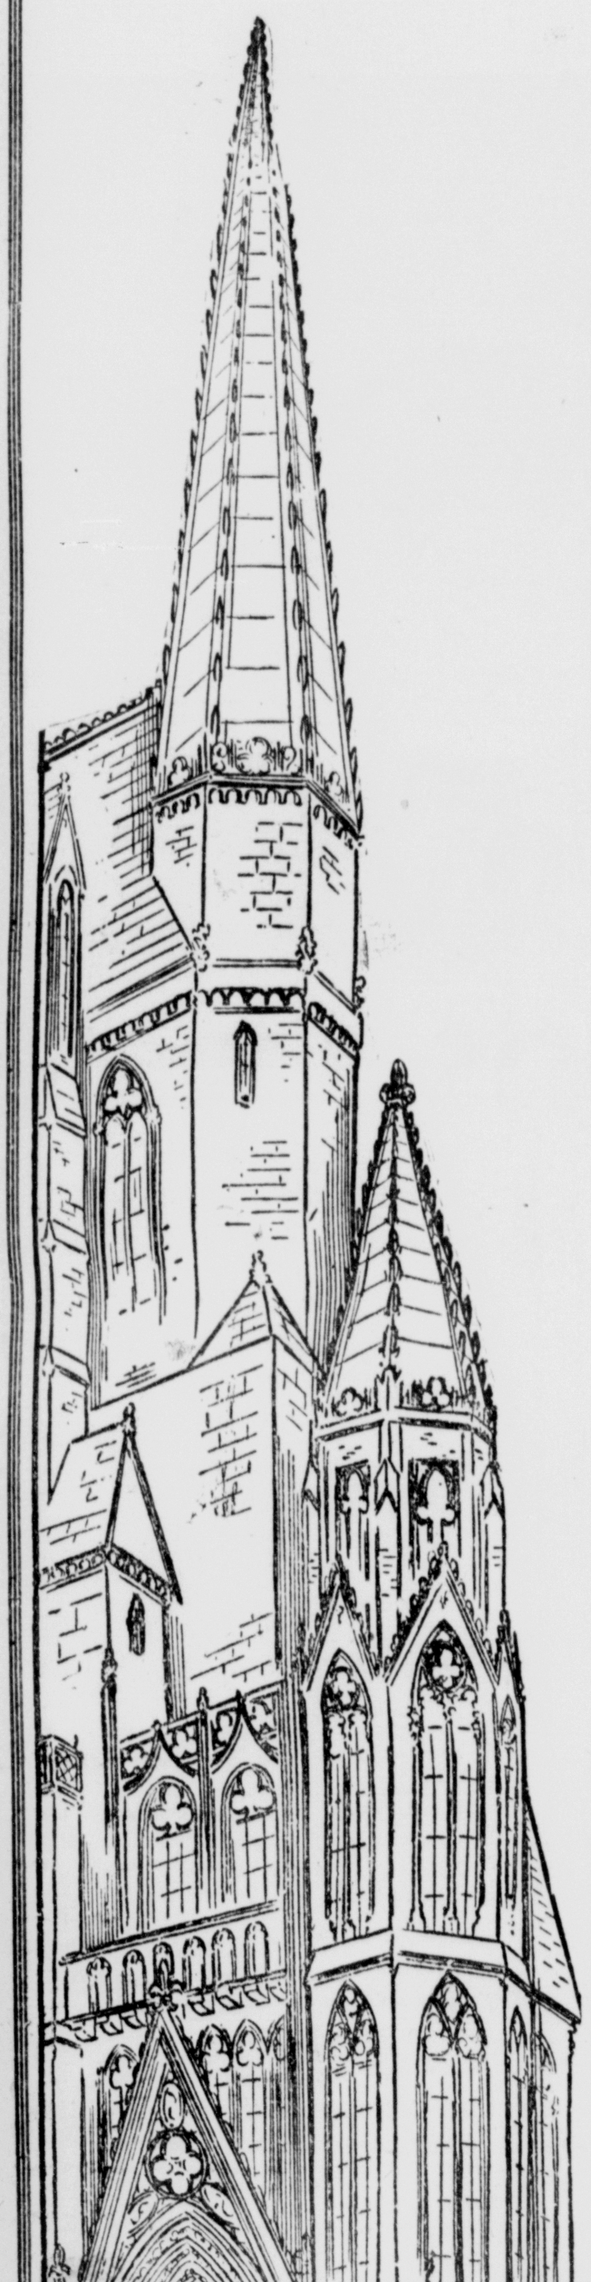
Why Go to Church?



It has been suggested that we are in the midst of a trend toward pagan homes in Christian America; that religious sanctions are having less influence than formerly in setting the ideals of family life. That this suggestion merits serious thought may well be believed when we register the thrill-chasing aims of throngs of less thoughtful people and consider the increasing seriousness, even among thoughtful Christian parents, of the problem of Christian character building and worship in the home.

Why go to Church? Because it is a place of worship. Why worship? Well, why breath? Each is vital to life and this enigma, we name life, is most vital. True, it was thrust upon us, true, it is snatched from us, but we may deal with it while it is ours.

How best deal with life? Worship, I have intimated, is as vital to life's spirit as breath to its body. History proves that statement instinctively. Worship has impregnated the soul of man through the ages.

Where worship? In the Church we find beauty, peace, repose, a sane outlook earthly and eternal, for which life is casting up an insurgent cry, lest its soul be fed into the man of a materialistic mechanical age. The church stands a beacon of light and in the folds of her majestic garments are her children, the school, the hospital, the fraternity, and the home, steadying life's fitful candle of reason, with the promise of the arc, IF SHE BE SUPPORTED.

Imperfect but noble souls have poured into her chalices, forces of soul and money that life's stream might be purified. We have profited. They have handed us their torch. Why go to Church? To be four-square with life.

Subject: Why Go to Church?

REV. L. T. DAVISON, Pastor

First United Presbyterian Church

There is another question that is parallel with this of our subject, and that is, "Why be a Christian?" If it is right to be a Christian then it is right to go to church because the church is the weekly rendezvous of the followers of Christ.

There can many reasons for going to church be given, and all good reasons. Churchgoing is primarily a matter of worship. Man is a religious being. He will have a God even though it be one of wood or stone or an animal. And if he has a God then he will in a sense localize his deity by having a place of communion with it. I had a letter from a man who went to Egypt as a missionary. He was on vacation; he was sitting by the dusty highway writing the letter which I received. As he sat there it was the time of Mohammedan devotions. Every Mohammedan devotee got off his donkey, spread his mat and got down on his knees with his face toward Mecca and went through his devotions apparently unconscious of the thousands of passers-by that were actually rubbing clothes with them. That was not only the time but the place of devotions. His religious instinct was so strong that he was compelled to worship. I am not making a plea for Mohammedanism, but I wish before God that the rank and file of Christendom had something of their genius of devotion.

Another reason for going to church is to keep constantly before men the idea that "Man's chief end is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever." A man's business is not primarily to be a butcher or baker or candlestick maker. These are only side issues and are justifiable only so far as they contribute to his business of representing God in the world. This not the popular way of looking at life. Secular vocation is given first place and religion is a sort of side issue. The church will help to foster the spirit of devotion to God and lead men to give to their religious life the place of preeminence.

Psalm 27:4: "One thing have I desired of the Lord and that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple."

This included nearly 165,000 pounds of "cod-fish which is always a great favorite here on Good Friday. Although meat and eggs were very high, fish was only half the price of 1929 and this fact, together with the governments Eat More Fish campaign, made a good season for "brain food."

COOLIE TURNS PROFITEER IN CAR STRIKE

Menial is Monarch as Trolley Wheels Stop.

GETS OWN PRICE

Shanghai Serf of Rickshaw Feasts for Month.

By The Associated Press.

SHANGHAI—A monarch for a month was the Shanghi rickshaw coolie, that most menial of serfs whose back breaking toil yields the smallest pay known to Chinese labor. The street railway strike gave him his moment. When it came he proved his sagacity by turning profiteer and amassing wealth. But when it went, he returned to the traditional status.

Seldom does the rickshaw coolie get a chance at high finance. But when bus drivers and tram workers strike his is the only vehicle remaining and if he makes the most of the opportunity it is one of the few indications he gives of being truly human.

In the recent strike the motorized transportation of the international settlement was paralyzed. The rickshaw man was so much in demand that he brazenly fixed his own prices—and got them.

This lasted for almost a month. First the bus system and then the trams shut down. One day the drivers simply failed to show up for work. The populace waited patiently until pressed to walk. This was not pleasant on cobbled pavements. So there was the rickshaw.

It took no time at all to show that the coolies could not be paid for their toil now with a copper or a kick, according to the traveler's mood.

For days the streets were jammed with rickshaws. Traffic was blocked at almost every corner by the sweating coolies attempting to keep up their dog trot despite pedestrian crowds.

Then one day the street car and bus companies decided to give their employes extra rice allowances. That ended the strike. Today the rickshaw coolie is just his old patient self, hoping under his mystic stoicism for another day of wealth and power.

MIDLAND HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES HEAR DR. JORDAN

55 STUDENTS GET DIPLOMAS IN STEEL CITY

Pennsylvania State Official Delivers Address.

FORMER PASTOR

Commencement Exercises Held In Lincoln Auditorium.

MIDLAND — "Lay up all possible knowledge, secure and develop brains for brains are not expensive, neither are they subject to income tax or school tax," said Dr. C. G. Jordan, of Harrisburg, secretary of the Pennsylvania state department of agriculture, and former pastor of the First Presbyterian church of East Liverpool, O., in a commencement address last night to 55 graduates of Lincoln High school. His subject was "The Steps That Lead to the Stars."

He outlined the steps as being "vision, knowledge, principal, perseverance and enthusiasm." Every structure, picture or concern today was once the dream of some human mind, it needed that vision, he said. Without the knowledge, the dreams are useless and non-progressive. When the two are forged together it must follow some track, some oneness that guides toward one goal. The motive power that urges along the dream is perseverance. But all this is negative without that dynamic power—enthusiasm—in the minds of the supporters, the friends and the dreamer himself. Enthusiasm acts as the binding link and not only heads the steps that lead to the stars and success and fame but actually supports and leads the lesser essentials toward the goal."

The graduating class of 26 boys and 29 girls wore caps and gowns. The invocation was asked by Rev. William R. Greggs, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Dr. Jordan, who terminated a three-year pastorate at the First Presbyterian church in East Liverpool, O., in 1903, spoke at length upon the growth of Midland from the small village as he remembered it to a city today. He stressed the prospects of the Steel City in expanding and called upon it as a community to aid the graduates of 1930.

GUILFORD LAKE TO BE FLOODED EARLY IN FALL

Agriculture Director Green Promises Speedy Job.

VISITS LISBON

State Will Start Hanover Work Monday.

LISBON — "Guilford lake will be filled with water to the brim early in the fall," State Director of Agriculture Perry L. Green, has advised County Commissioner J. Howard Sinclair, Commissioners' Clerk Lemuel H. Johnson and County Auditor Elmer E. Walker.

"In addition, the department proposes also to build a fish hatchery of from 20 to 30 pools southeast of the Guilford dam," Green told the county officials in a conference here. He added that "Guilford park will be second to none in Ohio."

The state will begin work Monday on the lake, Green said. All necessary resolutions have been spread upon the journals of the department, and funds are available.

One of Ohio's Show Places

"According to plans for Guilford park we have outlined at Columbus, this spot will be one of the show places of Ohio," Green declared. We also have the assurance that when the lake is filled and the project completed that the Columbiana county commissioners will pass the necessary legislation to improve the road from Lisbon through Guilford and westward from that point.

"It will not take long to cover the hundreds of acres with water, and the lake will be stocked with fish as soon as practicable. The hatchery that the department will build at Guilford will be a modern in every respect. Water from the lake will be piped into the hatchery pools, and will have a natural fall into the west fork of Beaver creek. I can assure the sponsors of Guilford Lake park that the project will be finished by the department of agriculture within a few months, and the lake will be ready by September.

Protection Promised

Green informed county officials that Guilford park would be listed officially by the department of agriculture as one of the scenic spots of the state and that the project is also to receive the full protection of the state, with Deputy Game Warden L. W. Boring in charge of this phase of the work.

Green was accompanied to Lisbon Guilford park, by Assistant Director of Agriculture Clarence E. Rowland, former farm bureau agent for Columbiana county; Dr. W. T. McCandless, state vetenarian, and Frank Lytle of the state conservation division.

100 YOUTHS EDUCATED AT MARSH SCHOOL

Refute Sketches of Dickens' Oliver Twist.

CENTER GROWING

No Ragged Little Boys —All are Well Kept.

By The Associated Press.

VAN WERT, O.—Here in Northern Ohio, at the gateway of the Middle West, exists the George H. Marsh Foundation School—a constant refutation of the grim picture of foundling institutions sketched by Charles Dickens in Oliver Twist. Figuratively, one discovers upon entering the campus, there is no ragged little boy, begging vainly for another bowl of porridge.

The institution was built with a $4,600,000 bequest left by the late philanthropist—and it now has an enrollment of more than 100 pupils, most of whom, according to the terms of the will, are without the aid of parents or guardians—quite alone in a world which will demand of them upon maturity, sharp mental and physical tools with which to carve out their individual niches.

Five years ago the school was the first realization of a wildly romantic, philanthropic dream. There were only twenty-five pupils. Since that time nine large brick buildings have been constructed. The entire layout stands on the farm left by the late philanthropist.

Inside the buildings each day the students, who otherwise might go sparsely clad and tutored, attend classes. The three "R's" are amplified, until they become an entire alphabet. The spelling of the word cat becomes an insignificant primary step, as the children learn of the Ems Dispatch and the Battle of Austerlitz.

Before a child enters the Marsh School, an investigation is made of his family history and background, and every applicant for admission is given both a mental and a physical examination. The will of the benefactor requires that each scholar "be sound in mind and body."

A competent nurse is in charge of the health of the school. Mental health also is scanned carefully day in and day out.

Inside one notices at once that the pupils are being instructed in such a manner as to make education "self obtained." The ancient theory that each student is a test tube, into which the ingredients of learning are poured, to have what effect they will, is obsolete here. The conditions of a modern world, abounding with artificial life, are presented daily to the pupils in their classrooms. The elements with which they will have to deal when they leave the school are emphasized. Girls are taught homemaking, boys learn anything, from the acquiring of the necessary naivity and finesse to enable them someday to be statesmen to cabinet construction.

Nature also abounds in this spot. Around the buildings trees sway in the wind. Tiny pathways lead to woods. There are small bodies of water. There is open country.

The out-of-doors lurks, a sorcerer, beyond the windows.

Music also plays an important part in the life of the school. All phases of music are taught the children. They hear Beethoven and Handel daily, and strains of Verdi's operas are familiar to them.

The school work consumes eleven months of the year. These are eleven months in which cheery progress is made, each day being, to the otherwise unprotected young, another step up the ladder to life, its actualities and severe demands.

FARMERS EAT OWN BUTTER, BOOST PRICES

Former Surplus Has Been Reduced By Half.

BELT EXPANDS

But His Wallet, Too, is Picking Up Weight.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O.—Up a ladder of butter climbs the Ohio farmer, glancing downward, occasionally, and realizing that he is extricating himself from a "bad spot."

For, according to a report issued here by R. B. Stoltz, professor of dairy technology at Ohio State university, the farmer is consuming more butter and thus benefiting himself economically.

His former surplus of this product today has been reduced to half. This may have some effect on his waist line. His children may become paunchy, fat urchins, who run slowly at play because of added weight—but they are better off financially than in the lean years when butter was treated with the reverance of gold.

Following thee slump in butter prices last January, according to the report, butter dropped in sales ratio to 50 per cent. Now there has been a gradual increase in consumption, especially among farmers, says Professor Stoltz. A questionnaire sent to butter salesmen has disclosed about 10 per cent more butter is being eaten in rural sections than six months ago. All salesmen have reported an increase in sales, as much as 30 per cent in some of the larger markets.

For the most part, says Professor Stoltz, the increased consumption is due to the lower prices. The campaign of the dairyman to inform consumers of the benefits of butter eating however has had some effect on the amount consumed.

"The emergency campaign," he says, "has convinced dairy farmers that a united effort can aid greatly in building an increased consumer demand in dairy products"

If you move in June something terrible may happen to you if you are at all aesthetic!

You may find no flowers around your new home.

But cheer up! You may still have a garden before the summer is over.

This assertion has been made by Victor H. Ries, extension florist specialist, whose department is cultivation, at Ohio State university.

Ries recommends that the flowers be grown, until they are one or two inches high, in small seedbed to which has been added some leaf mold, peat moss, or well rotted manure, thoroughly stirred into the soil. After they are two inches tall, the plants may then be transplanted to their place in the garden.

Seeds of the Alysum, corn flower, annual phlox, portulace, nasturtium, marigold, pink, baby's breath, and many others may still be sown and give blossoms this summer.

Reacting to the influence of comparatively high prices for potatoes last season, farmers in the southern potato producing states have planted 15 per cent more potatoes than a year ago, but due to lower expected yields the larger expected acreage will have little effect on the prices to be received for Ohio grown potatoes this summer, according to C. R. Arnold, extension economist for Ohio State university.

Crop forecasts for the southern states, called the first early states, indicate a probable yield of 25 million bushels compared with 24½ million bushels for the last crop.

In the second tier of southern states, including the states of Maryland, New Jersey, Kansas and Oklahoma, the acreage is five per cent greater than it was a year ago, but it is still about six per cent less than the average acreage for teh past five years.

The 1929 potato crop for the country, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was 357 million bushels, almost 110 million bushels less than for the previous year. These, says Arnold, are now practically all moved from the markets and will not greatly influence the price to be received from earlier potatoes in Ohio.

Harry D. Burris, of North Lewisburg, Ohio, claims to have the world's largest bass viol. It measures 15 feet from end to end.

STATE BUYING SHAD EGGS NOW

ALBANY. — Shad fishermen along the Hudson river are finding a ready market in the state conservation department for shad eggs.

For several years the conservation department has been buying shad eggs in large quantities, hatching them out and returning the small fish to the river.

Between 1924 and 1929, the catch of shad in the Hudson increased from 55,000 pounds to 226,000.

A WONDER in TRAFFIC

Oldsmobile's ease of handling and quick responsiveness make it a wonderful car in traffic. Every control operates so smoothly and effectively. Clutch, brakes, gear-shift, and steering—all work with delightful ease. A touch on the throttle, and the car flashes away as the signal light changes. And it pulls down to a smooth, silent stop immediately, when the signal's against you. As for parking, just try it yourself. Pick a restricted space at the curb—and see how easy it is to fit Oldsmobile into that space. Then, try Oldsmobile on the road. Its all-round performance will tell you why Oldsmobile is such a great car to own.

NEXT FRIDAY DEADLINE FOR PRIMARY LIST

Republicans, Democrats Speed Work On Slates.

COX TALK TOPIC

Former Governor Seen As Party's Wet Leader.

By MURRAY POWERS
Staff Correspondent for the Review

COLUMBUS, O., June 7.—With less than a week remaining before the deadline falls on the filing of petitions by candidates seeking nomination in the August primary, both Republicans and Democrats were making efforts to complete their slates by the first of the week. While many candidates have been announced, still there are many petitions, yet to be filed with the secretary of state's office. Friday midnight is the deadline.

Today closed a weey of developments in Ohio political circles. Taking the headline position, of course, was the Democratic victory dinner so called because of the confidence the party feels that it will be victorious when the ballots are counted in November. Members of both parties still were talking about the disagreement revealed in the address of former Gov. James M. Cox, of Dayton and former U. S. Senator Altee Pomerene, of Canton, and Martin L. Davey of Kent. Cox and Pomerene assailed the eighteenth amendment, the former declaring for its repeal, while Davey urged his party not to permit the prohibition issue to be brought into the party this year.

The Cox statement naturally brought forth much discussion and some political observers, particularly in the national capital, were inclined to forsee the former Ohio governor heading the wet movement in his party.

On the other hand many Republicans were outwardly expressing gratitude for the division of thought and statement in Thursday night's rally. With the possibility of a Democratic party split over the prohibition issue Republicans felt that such a break would further strengthen their chances in November.

Mrs. Clark is Mourned.

Regret was expressed throughout the state over the sudden death of Mrs. Hugh T. Clark, of Steubenville, Republican national committee-woman. Mrs. Clark was seen as a particularly active woman in Republican affairs and her loss will be felt keenly.

It is rumored about the capital that Mrs. Wilma Sinclair LeVan may be chosen as Mrs. Clark's successor. Mrs. LeVan was national committee woman until 1928, When she was succeeded by Mrs. Clark. That was the result of the Willis-Hoover battle for Ohio support in the April primary. Senator Willis was supported by Mrs. LeVan, while Mrs. Clark gave her support to Herbert Hover. With the death of Willis the Hoover forces rode into power and Mrs. Clark was honored for her services.

The Democratic fight for the U. S. senatorial nomination became more of a free-for-all with the entrance of Robert J. Buckley of Cleveland. Buckley was former congressman from the twenty-first district and is entering the race on a prohibition repeal platform.

With Buckley in there are now five candidates for senator. The others are W. W. Durbin, of Kenton, Charles V. Truax of Bucyrus, George S. Myers of Cleveland and John McSweeney of Wooster.

McCulloch's Foes Active

On the Republican side there has been a constant plea from a group not so favorable to Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch of Canton for another candidate to enter the race for the nomination. William R. Hopkins, former city manager of Cleveland, first was boomed; now it is hinted that former State Senator George Bender may run. Bender took out nomination petitions here but refused to say what use he planned to make of them.

Other candidiates who announced themselves for various offices this week included Coleman Avery of Cincinnati, former judge of the supreme court, and Charles Hubbell, Cleveland attorney. Both are Democrats and both are seeking the nominations to the state supreme court bench. Will P. Stephenson of West Union previously had entered his candidacy for the bench.

With the withdrawal of Francis Poulson of Cleveland from the race for attorney general, Democrats were looking for a candidate. It is said Samuel Bergert, retired Cleveland attorney, is circulating his petitions and will enter for this post. Poulson ran against Bettman two years ago and was overwhelmingly defeated.

John Henry Newman of Fletcher announced late in the week that he would be a candidate for secretary of state. Earlier in the week William V. Goshorn of Galion announced his candidacy for the same post.

Governor Bans Gambling

That Governor Myers Y. Cooper is not satisfied with the race betting situation as it was left last season was indicated this week when he issued orders that gambling at the West Jefferson dog track must stop.

The races were brought to a sudden stop Thursday night when Madison county deputies raided the track and confiscated $111 in cash, the "contribution" tickets and the mechanical rabbit.

Late yesterday when officials of the track were arraigned in commonpleas court they declared they would make a test case of "contribution" betting and fight it to a finish.

Word from Cleveland came to the capitol this week that Maurice Maschke, Republican county chairman of Cuyahoga has no intention of giving up the reins of office when his term expires in August. It has often been reported that Maschke would step out, but now he has indicated, it is said, that he will be re-elected chairman for another two-year term. He also will continue as state national committeeman, his term not being up until 1932.

WALSH ANSWERS BISHOP CANNON

Montana Senator Contradicts Churchman's Contention Regarding Charge of Contempt.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Senator Walsh of Montana delivered the latest thrust in the give-and-take between Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and the senate lobby committee today with a contradiction of the churchman's contention that lack of a quorum at the meeting he walked out on precluded any legal guilt of contempt.

In a statement published this morning, Cannon said he intended no discourtesy to the committee by walking out at Thursday's session.

The Montanan, acting chairman of the committee, said the fact that only two committeemen were present, did not excuse Cannon from being in contempt for leaving without permission. He added the churchman had appeared as voluntary witness but could not leave without the committee's consent. But Cannon believes the contrary to be true.

Indications were that some action against Cannon would be proposed but a definite plan of procedure will not be determined until the return of Chairman Caraway from Arkansas.

FIRE LIGHTS CHICAGO LOOP

Seven-story Building Formerly Occupied by American Express Co. is Destroyed.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Fire that lighted the Loop at 1 a. m. today and for a time threatened nearby department stores, was brought under control only after it had destroyed the seven-story building formerly occupied by the American Express Co.

The interior of the building, which is on Monroe street between Dearborn and State, was ruined by fire last Christmas day. Flames today completed the destruction. Fire Marshal Corrigan was unwilling to estimate the damage until he had completed an investigation.

Two firemen were injured, not seriously, by falling debris.

MARKETS

STOCKS FALL IN BEAR RUSH

Trading Reaches Swiftest Pace Since Early May.

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The stock market finally gave way with the rush today to the persistent bear pounding to which it has been intermittently subjected for several days. Stocks were dumped upon the market in huge volume, and trading reached the swiftest pace experienced since early May. A wide assortment of leading issues declined 2 to 7 points, with some of the more volatile stocks recording more spectacular losses.

One of the most unsettling developments was the announcement that the stock exchange had granted permission to Radio Corp. of America to omit its quarterly earnings statement. In view of the difficulties presented by capital changes, Radio's earnings have been the subject of considerable bearish conjecture, as prices were drastically reduced during the early months of the year to clear away unsold holiday inventories. It is stated that the present inventory position is satisfactory.

Wall Street was flooded with bearish rumors as usual during sharply declining markets. One report that a large electrical manufacturer was planning to lay of a large number of its employes was emphatically denied. Electrical World reported that equipment business was fair. "Although the situation as a whole lacks vigor and snap." A small reduction in steel scrap price at Chicago, after the recent increase at Pittsburgh, was somewhat disappointing.

Selling was undoubtedly swelled by liquidation of marginal accounts impaired by the rather abrupt drop late yesterday. Forced liquidation, however, was said in brokerage circles to be light.

With business entering its summer lull, and efforts to resume the upward movement in stocks having met with distinct failure, short term holders of stocks saw little reason to retain their shares.

Total sales for the two-hour session approximated 2,250,000 shares. More than total sales for several recent five-hour sessions. The closing tone was weak.

Several issues were depressed to new lows for the year. In which U. S. Steel was conspicuous. Steel sold off nearly 3 points. Touching a new 1930 minimum nuder 161½. Compared to the November low of 150.

Such issues as Radio, Radio-Keith, American Can, Johns Manville, Fox, United Aircraft, and Standard Gas lost 3 points or more. Shares declining 4 to 7 or more, included Allied Chemical, Westinghouse Electric, Air Reduction, Vanadium, Houston Oil, and A. M. Byers. Losses of around 10 points were recorded by Case, Auburn and Worthington.

GRAIN

Chicago.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Reports of favorable weather for maturing and harvesting the domestic winter crop led to a pronounced downturn of values early today on the wheat, weakness of the New York Stock Market counted also as a bearish infuence, and, temporarily the trade ignored dearth of moisture over the spring wheat belt. Starting unchanged to 3-4 off, wheat later showed setbacks all around. Corn, oats and provisions were likewise easier, with corn opening 1-4 to 1-2 cent down and subsequently declining.

Carol to Become King

who took off from Le Bourget shortly after 2 p. m. with Captain Popp of Rumania as his lone passenger. The aviation company today refused to give the exact location at which Carol was picked up.

News of Carol's return was received with great interest in Paris which has been following with interest the prince's career during his exile in and around Paris.

Reporters scoured the city today trying to locate Madam Lupescu, the prince's former companion, but it was ascertained that she left for Switzerland eight days ago. Her departure coinciding with first reports of Carol's imminent return to Rumania.

Carol's son by his morganic marriage to Zizi Lambrino when he was a young prince, is attending school in Paris. He is a healthy, strong little chap nearly 11 years old and today was playing in his school yard apparently oblivious to the fact that his father's name once again was on all front pages

Wears General's Uniform.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 7—Dashing Prince Carol, whose amours have disturbed this country's politics for 10 years, returned to Bucharest by airplane last night after five years' absence. Today he was the central figure in a situation which may portend sensational developments in Rumania.

He left behind him in Paris his red haired companion of several years, Mme. Magda Lupescu, for love of whom, in 1925, he signed away his rights to the throne and established the succession which led two years later to crowning of his infant son, Michael, in his stead.

He came back home attired in the uniform of a Rumanian general, although bearing the name given him by parliament after his renunciation of the throne, Carol Caraiman. Friends met him at Cotroceni airdrome and went with him to the royal palace where he talked with his brother Nicholas, whom he is expected to replace on the regency council.

Cabinet Convenes.

Later he was received by the Minister of Interior and Premier Juliu Maniu, who immediately convoked an all-night session of the cabinet to determine what place the 36-year-old Prince Father could take in the government under the Rumanian constitution.

The cabinet met again early this morning, and adjourned so that M. Maniu could attend a meeting of the regency council. Shortly afterward the premier announced that he would await a royal proclamation of Carol's return and then would resign. It was believed he would be asked to form a new government of concentration of all the parties.

The populace and the army received word of the errant prince's arrival with enthusiasm. The news spread rapidly, but it was not until this morning that the government issued an official communique stating simply that the father of the king was in Bucharest and that the cabinet had met to consider the situation. The nation was quiet.

Queen Leaves Capital.

It was believed here that Queen Marie, his mother, who left here yesterday for Oberammergau, ostensibly to see the Passion Play, knew nothing of his daring coup. She was supposed generally to have planned meeting her oldest son somewhere in Germany and talking the situation over with him.

Prince Nicholas will leave Bucharest June 8 on a long European trip, and Princess Helen, mother of Michael and divorced wife of Carol, is expected not to remain. It was expected here that in some manner a way would be found for Carol to replace Nicholas as the royal representative on the regency council. There was said to be no immediate desire on his part or that of his partisans to raise him to the throne, at least immediately.

His return was the result of negotiations with friends and emissaries of the Peasant party government covering months. When recently he promised to leave Mme. Lupescu, the Liberal opposition awoke anew to its dislike of him and fought bitterly to prevent his return.

It was said opposition extended as far as advances to Prince Charles, second Belgian prince, to ask him to take the throne left vacant in 1927 by King Ferdinand's death, and occupied now by 8-year-old Michael. Carol, hearing of the situation, thought it better to risk all while it was not too late and decided upon his surprising and dramatic return.

TARIFF BILL NOSES COUNTED

Smoot-Hawley Vote In Senate Will Be Close.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Leaders in the senate's tariff fight counted votes anxiously today and looked forward to a final roll call on the much-disputed Smoot-Hawley measure within a week.

So close does the outcome promise to be, that some senators have been speculating on how Vice President Curtis would vote in case of a tie. The regular Republicans claim a slight margin, but the Democratic independent Republican coalition, opposing the bill, is not ready to admit defeat.

Both sides kept an eye today upon Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, whose vote was called in the "doubtful" column. Reed was in London as a delegate to the arms conference while much of the tariff debate was taking place. He took a copy of the conference bill and bulky brief case full of related documents to his home for a week-end of study.

Although the conference report was placed before the senate in two sections, an agreement has been reached under which both will be voted upon at a single roll call.

Sent back to conference for its fourth revision, the measure was ready today for final submission to the two houses of congress, except for one provision which presented some temporary difficulty, the conferees deferred until Monday a final meeting at which they expect to reach an agreement upon this clause, that affecting the duties on watch jewels.

Newsies' Sluggers In Action

Joe Canne Hits Homer, Triple, for Milkmen.

TROTTING out his strongest lineup of the last week or so Manager Les McMath of the Chester News nine saw his boys break their losing streak as they copped from the second place Golden Stars, 9 to 5, last night at Patterson Field.

The Newsies hit the ball pretty hard, getting nine hits and as many runs off Deshler's offerings. Sonny was not himself last night, his slants being ineffective in face of a continual barrage. He gave way to Andy O'Bosky in the last two frames.

Johnson started for Chester and he, too, found the going rough. The Milkmen drove him out of the box in the second and Springer finished. Earl delivered a satisfactory brand of ball for the West Virginians.

Smashing out a triple and a home run, drixin in three of the Golden Star runs, Shortstop Joe Canne carried off batting honors. Mike Cebula laced out a pair of bingles in three times up and drove in four runs for Chester.

The visitors scored four runs in the first inning. Wyant walked, stole second and went to third on Maley's wide peg. Campbell walked and stole second. Wyant finished on Mike Cebula's sacrifice fly to center and Pete Cebula's double to right brought Campbell in. Connors singled to center, scoring Pete. "Ty" stole second and finished when Pumphrey clapped out a hit to center.

The Milkmen produced a run in the first on Canne's triple and O'Brosky's sacrifice. In trying to stop Canne's hit past second, Connors twisted his ankle and was forced to retire from the game. Pete Marshall taking the keystone job.

The Stars tied the count in the second. Bayley walked. Deshler singled to left, Bayley going to third. Joe Canne bingled for four bags to center, accounting for three runs. This blow finished Johnson, Springer taking up slab duties from there on.

Pete Cebula's single to center, Marshall's sacrifice, Cox' triple and Springer's sacrifice produced two more Chester runs in the third.

The Newsies got another in the fourth when Campbell was hit by a pitched ball. Mike Cebula singled to center and Campbell counted when O'Brosky failed to stop L. Hall's peg to third.

Chester scored its last two runs in the fifth. Pumphrey drew a walk and went to third on Springer's single to center. Campbell was poked in the ribs again, filling the bases.

And big Mike Cebula is a tough egg to pitch to when the bases are all clogged up.

Michael connected for only a single but it was good for two runs.

The Dairymen rallied in the sixth to score one more run on singles by Davie, L. Hall and Moore and Bayley's sacrifice fly.

JACKIE COOGAN DUE HERE TONIGHT

That mid-west Irishman, Jackie Coogan, who tackles the toughest job he's ever faced when he meets Willie Davies, one of the world's greatest flyweights, in the opening show at the Foutts Brothers' East End bowl Tuesday night, is scheduled to arrive in East Liverpool tonight for final workouts.

Coogan is coming from Indianapolis, accompanied by his manager, Bert Shull.

Willie Davis and Pilot Jim Bichanan of Charleroi are due in the Pottery City Sunday night or Monday morning.

Coogan will work out at the Foutts Brothers' gymnasium in Washington street Sunday afternoon and again Monday while Davies will probably limber up Monday afternoon. The workouts will be open to the public.

Jackie Coogan has done most of his fighting, records show, in the middle west and on the Pacific coast.

He is but 23 years old but in the several years he has been fighting he has accumulated a record of 73 battles.

Prominent among his string of bouts are five with his home town rival, Happy Atherton. He recently won from Atherton in Indianapolis in the "rubber" match of the series to date.

Three weeks ago he knocked out Irish Mickey Gill in a 10-round scrap at Terra Haute, Ind.

His record also includes battles with Speedy Dado, Tommy Hughes, Ernie Peters, Pete Sansol and Johnny McCoy.

Veterans Continue Hitting

Rookies Face Job Displacing Ruth and Rice.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR., Associated Press Sports Writer.

THE younger batters of the American league haven't much chance to make names for themselves as long as those two old timers, George Herman Ruth and Edgar Charles Rice, continue to hit at their present rates. The Babe and Old Sam have almost a monopoly on the leagues' batting leadership, with Rice holding the highest honors.

Rice, a veteran of some 38 summers, 14 of them spent playing baseball for Washington, has made a record for consistent hitting this season that no younger rival has even threatened. The Senators have played 45 games so far; Rice has taken part in 44 of them; and only once has he failed to get at least one hit. Sam connected safely in 28 consecutive games before his streak was broken May 18 by Bob Grove of the Philadelphia Athletics. He picked up the series again the next day and has continued through 15 more games.

Not only has he hit nearly every day, but Rice has managed on a current average of .401. But that is nothing remarkable for any ore so interested in his batting. Sam puts a lot of thought into the business of getting hits, even going so far at times as to neglect the duty of tending the outfield while he figures out what is wrong with his stance. He never has led the league at the end of the season, but he has finished below the .300 mark only three times in his 14 years of service.

Rice had no chance to continue his batting streak yesterday, nor did his rivals do much hitting as wet grounds caused the postponement of two American league games while the pair that were played produced few hits compared to the totals that have been piled up in some recent games.

Joe Sewell of Cleveland and Russ Scarritt of the Boston Red Sox had perfect days with three and four hits respectively as the Indians gained a 9 to 4 victory over Boston, neither is in a position to threaten the batting leader. Sewell made the leading contribution to the game, one of two triples which aided in a five-run Cleveland rally in the eighth inning. The blows of the Philadelphia Athletics and St. Louis Browns were pretty well distributed in the 5 to 4 triumph of the world's champions. The winning pitcher, Roy Mahaffey, contributed a home run to his victory, but he had to step down in favor of George Earnshaw as the Browns put on another ninth inning rally.

Denny Southern of the Philadelphia Nationals turned in the best batting feat of the day to help the Phillies to a 14 to 5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. In five times at bat, he hit five times and scored five runs. Four of his hits were doubles, equalling an all-time major league record set on July 3, 1883, by Pop Anson and Abner Dalrymple of the Chicago Nationals, and equalled six times since then. Chuck Klein added his 15th home run to the Philly hits.

The New York Giants hit 17 times, ten of the blows being divided between Critz, Leach and Terry, and defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 7, to move into a three way tie in games with the Cards and Pittsburgh for third place in the national league. Pittsburgh gained the post by a one-point margin, defeating the Boston Braves, 4 to 3. A ninth inning homer by Adam Comorosky gave the Pirates the game after Gus Suhr's four bagger had tied the score in the seventh.

Chicago's Cubs scored their ninth successive victory at the expense of the Brooklyn Robins and Dazzy Vance, 13 to 0, and cut the Robins' lead from two games to one. Charley Root held Brooklyn to two singles while the Cubs were getting 10 hits off Vance in the six innings he lasted, and a half dozen more from his successors. Vance struck out a man for every hit, but he could not keep Chicago from scoring.

FIRST K. O. FOR RING VETERAN

By The Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., June 7. — When Billy Wells, former British welterweight king, was knocked out last night in the second round by young Jack Thompson, Negro welterweight champion of the world, it was the first time that Wells had ever been counted out in more than ten years of fighting.

The wily veteran was sent down for the count by a terrific overhand right that seemed to come out of nowhere. It landed flush and the British scrapper was counted out with seconds to spare.

Up to the time of the knockout blow, the champion and Wells had waged an even battle. Thompson was fighting his first bout since defeating Jackie Fields in Detroit and annexing the title. The title was not at stake, both being overweight.

MARY K. BROWNE TO PLAY AGAIN

CLEVELAND, O., June 7.—Mary K. Browne, one of the country's leading women golfers, was scheduled to return to competitive play today after a three-year banishment at the hands of the U. S. Golf association because she abandoned her amateur standing in tennis.

Herman and Rice Set Slugging Pace In Two Major Loop Races

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 7.—Sam Rice, Washington's veteran outfielder, found American league pitching more difficult last week, but not enough to keep him from pacing the junior circuit's batsmen for the third consecutive week, unofficial figures which include Wednesday's games revealed today.

Rice hit at a .375 clip for the week and finished with an average of .404, seven points shy of last week's mark. Al Simmons of Philadelphia, added six points to his mark and remained in second place with an average of .386, and Babe Ruth retained third place at .377, one point better than last week. Along with leading batsmen Rice topped the field in stolen bases, getting two during the week to bring his total to 10. He also led in total hits with 74 in 183 times at bat.

Ruth was in his familiar spot as head man of the home run brigade, with 18, four more than he had a week ago. He also had driven in 50 runs, scored 52 personally and his hitting was good for 124 total bases. Other leaders among the regulars were: Hodapp, Cleveland, .373; Cochrane, Philadelphia, .361; Barnett, Cleveland, .359; McManus, Detroit, .358; Foxx, Philadelphia, .356; Dickey, New York, .355; Combs, New York, .345; Jolley, Chicago, .345.

Cleveland lost two points from its team batting average during the week, but moved into a tie with Washington for first place when the Senators' average fell off four points to .299. The Yankees picked up six points and went into second place at .296. Philadelphia had scored 289 runs to lead the league, while Washington had the best defensive mark holding opponents to 197 trips across its plate.

Philadelphia assumed sole possession of first position in team fielding, improving their average two points to .976, and breaking out of a deadlock with Detroit. The Tigers slipped back two points and were tied with New York at .972. Boston completed seven double plays during the week and led with a season total of 53.

Bob Grove, Athletic southpaw, gained credit for one victory and led the pitchers with seven straight triumphs. Sad Sam Jones, Washington ace, suffered his first defeat of the season after winning six straight. Hel Harder of Cleveland was right behind Grove with six straight.

Other leaders: Triples, Combs, New York, 8; doubles, Gehringer, Detroit, and Cronin, Washington, 18 each; strikeouts, Grove, Philadelphia, 70.

Whitney Entry Rules Favorite

Whichone Challenges Supremacy of Gallant Fox.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 7.—William Woodward's Gallant Fox sought clear title to the American turf's three-year-old championship in the 62nd running of the Belmont stakes today with Harry Payne Whitney's Whichone a formidable threat to the Kentucky derby and Preakness winner.

Despite his impressive victories in the big stakes at Pimlico and Churchill Downs, Gallant Fox was a second choice in the betting. Latest odds placed Whichone in the favorite's role at 4 to 5.

Gallant Fox was held at 6 to 4.

Whichone, champion juvenile last season, raced impressively to win the withers last Saturday and the betting fraternity seemed convinced that the great son of Chicle-Flying Witch could hold his speed over the longer Belmont route—a mile and a half.

There were three other entrants for the $80,000 stake of which $66,000, goes to the winner. James Butler's questionnaire and Walter J. Calmon's Swinfield and Mr. Woodward's second string, Flying Gal, were listed as probable starters but none was expected to seriously threaten either Gallant Fox or Whichone.

The two favoriaes each was confronted with the opportunity to pass into the golden circle of thoroughbreds which have won $200,000 Whichone earned $135,000 as a juvenile and $27,145 more this year. Gallant Fox, a son of Sir Gallahad Third-Marguerite, earned $19,890 as a two-year-old and $117,800 this season.

A bottle of jockeys also loomed with the veteran Earl Sande on Gallant Fox and Sonny Workman on Whichone. Sande was cut about the face in an auto accident Thursday night but did not expect his slight injuries to be a handicap.

All colts in the Belmont carry a scale weight of 126 pounds with Flying Gal, the Woodward filly, assigned 121 pounds.

CUBS SCORING BY TENS NOW

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 7.—The National league champion Chicago Cubs apparently have decided to play baseball on a "ten or no count" basis.

Though crippled by the death of Hal Carlson and Rogers Hornsby's injury, the Cubs not only have won nine straight games, but in each of their last five battles, have produced not less than 10 runs.

Only one member of the regular lineup, outside of the pitchers, has batted less than .333 during the period. Captain Charley Grimm today had a mark during the five games of .579, while only Clyde Beck has failed to slug.

German Pounding Partners

Schmeling Batters Spar Mates Mercilessly.

By EDWARD J. NEIL, Associated Press Sports Writer.

ENDICOTT, N. Y., June 7.—The bell rang again today for the sparring partners, those battered, patched dissillusioned youngsters whose thankless task is to condition Max Schmeling for a world heavyweight championship fight with Jack Sharkey in the Yankee stadium Thursday night.

They meander aimlessly around his training camp during layoffs such as the German has taken, unnoticed and apparently unnoticing, some with swollen noses, bruised eye-brows and court plastered cheeks, others, the newcomers, fresh and anxious for a punch at the title challenger. They live part, eat apart and make no public appearances until called upon to face the clouting Teuton in his boxing drills. For the most part they are absolutely unknowns to the fight game and 17 of them have come and gone in three weeks.

Schemling, planning an aggressive, punching fight against Sharkey, is more than rough with his spar mates. He fights them as though each was Sharkey himself. He cuts and mauls and batters, punches them groggy, and then turns loose all the power in his short right hand to finish them as quickly as possible. They show eagerness with the first workout and from then on the chief fight is against time. To most of them the $25 a day pay is important money and the longer they are useful the bigger the stake.

When Schmeling first trained in the United States he was proud of the fact that he never had to punish a sparring partner unnecessarily. During preparation for his triumphant parade through Paulino Uzcudun he boasted that he had never in his life tried to knock out a helper. Apparently circumstances have altered cases for Schmeling today is setting a record for training savagery that only Jack Dempsey ever has equalled.

TRAVEL BY AIR

Has increased over 300 per cent in the past 6 months on some of the important large Air lines.

More of our local citizens have traveled by air on business trips in the last six months than in all of previous 3 years.

It is getting to be a common sight to see passengers left over at Air stations on commercial lines, account of insufficient airplanes to take care of the demand for passage.

Stunt Flying Sunday

Investments in properly located airports are rapidly increasing in demand. Airplane salesmen visit the local airport almost daily, demonstrating and pushing the sale af airplanes.

Students are rapidly enlisting as they observe the rapidly increasing opportunities in some of the 18 different lines, calling for trained men and women at good salaries. Prospective students should see the chief pilot at the airport, Lincoln Highway for course and terms.

FANS 19 FOES BUT IS BEATEN

DECATUR, Ill., June 7.—A leading candidate for the title of "most unlucky baseball player" of the season is young Tom Bridges, right-handed pitcher of the Evansville, Ind., Three Eye league club.

In a night game against Decatur last night, Bridges, who went to Evansville a year ago from the University of Tennessee, struck out 19 batsmen in eight innings—and lost, 5 to 2. Five of the seven hits off Bridges were clustered in the first two innings and his teammates couldn't do enough hitting off Spear of Decatur to help him out.

CARTER QUEST REVIVES TALK OF TOMB SITE

Englishman to Seek Alexander's Bier.

NEW THEORIES

Alexandria Archaeologist Brings New Evidence.

By The Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt—Howard Carter's decision to search for the tomb of Alexander the Great in Alexandria once more has revived the discussion of location of the tomb.

E. Breccia, an Alexandria achaeologist, has brought forth new evidence in support of the theory. Leone Africano, the Arab geographer, born in Granada in 1483, he says, stated that the faithful regarded the inside of the Mosque Zul Karnein with veneration as the tomb of the prophet and of King Iskander (Zul Karnein is the Arab name of Alexander the Great).

The famed traveler Marmol, visiting Alexandria in 1546, stated that the "tomb of the Prophet Alexander was in the center of the town, not far from the Church of St. Mark's—today's coptic church of the same name. This is about 300 miles from the Mosque Nebi Daniel."

Similar statements were made by the German traveler, George Sandey.

Opponents of the theory contend that Perdicas, most influential of Alexander's great generals, made viceroy in place of Alexander's son Phillipp II, was bitterly hostile toward Ptolamaus and had him made Satrap of Ekypt to get him out of the way. Later they came to mortal grips and Perdicas fell.

Under such circumstances, it seems hardly likely that Perdicas should have sent the dead body of his king to Egypt for burial by his opponent.

Moreover, no historian of the time of Ptolamaus or Alexander ever mentioned that the king had been buried there.

Nevertheless, the excavations to be undertaken by Mr. Carter cannot fail to shed the light of truth, or furnish new information upon the burial place.

Countries comprising North, South and Central America and the West Indies were the best market for American-made hand tools in 1929.

WOMEN'S GOLF REACHES F

THE THEATER

BIG HE-MAN ACTOR UNDER THUMB OF 'THE LITTLE WOMAN'

Matinee Idol of Other Years Sees Daughter In Star Role.

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Some pathetic figures in Hollywood:

The big he-man actor, master of every situation on the screen, but at home virtually under the thumb of "the little woman."

The washed-up star who splurges desperately with full-page ads in film trade journals.

The matinee idol of other years pausing near a theater to gaze sadly at his daughter's name in the marquee mazdas.

The chorus girl who is developing varicose veins.

The star who talks about her "next picture"—unaware that her contract is not to be renewed.

The erstwhile extra girl who considers her bright new contract sufficient reason to snub her former friends.

MAE SUES AGAIN

Mae Murray has filed another law-suit, this time over an apartment house controversy.

Her most recent, until now, was against the producers of her only talkie, "Peacock Alley," because they did not star her in another.

She is probably Hollywood's most inveterate suit-filer. If anyone ever sues Miss Murray, that will be news!

Jiggs, the dog star of the all-barkie comedies, has lost his job. Temperament was blamed.

The next barkie, incidentally, will be "The Dogway Melody," modeled after the film revues and "The Broadway Melody."

Simile: Inseparable as Jack Oakie and his sweatshirt.

NOTES IN PASSING

One advantage of being a movie actor is that one with a "black eye" doesn't have to use the old story about bumping into a door.

He can pass it off as make-up.

Claudette Colbert will not return to California after her world tour with her husband, Norman Foster, but will make talkies in New York.

"Hell's Angles," opening at last, sets a new high mark locally for premiere ticket prices, with $11 top. And next day "regular prices" will prevail!

WILLIAM POWELL HAS VANCE ROLE IN "BENSON CASE"

Thrills Abound In Detective Story on Screen At Ceramic.

Closely upon the heels of "The Canary Murder Case" and "The Greene Murder Case," comes S. S. Van Dine's third thrilling mystery, "The Benson Murder Case," which opened a two-day engagement at the Ceramic theater Friday.

If you enjoy detective mysteries, "The Benson Murder Case," is sure to please. William Powell, who appeared in the chief role in other two Van Dine pictures, is also featured in this production.

In "The Benson Murder Case," Powell again plays the detective hero, Philo Vance. Eugene Pallette, remembered for his highly human characterizations of Sergeant Heath in the previous Van Dine successes, is funnier than ever in "The Benson Murder Case." E. H. Calvert again plays the role of the dignified district attorney, and Paul Lukas is also in the cast. Around these pivotal and familiar characters, Paramount has built up a strictly "type" cast to interpret the people conceived in Van Dine's novel.

Frank Tuttle, who directed "The Greene Murder Case," and followed it with "Sweetie" and "Only the Brave," directed "The Benson Murder Case." Van Dine's story, which was published in syndicate form was adopted for the screen by Bartlett Cormack, the young playwright who wrote "The Racket," and adapted "The Greene Murder Case," "Woman Trap," "The Laughing Lady' and "Gentlemen of The Press."

The bill also includes Vitaphone varieties, an all-talking Paramount comedy, "The Home Edition," Fox news and a Dinsey cartoon.—H. J. K.

AMERICAN

Many of Hollywood's most famous stars participated without knowing it in the making of "Let's Go Places," the Fox Movietone musical extravaganza, now showing at the American theater.

The picture's action is largely laid in the screen capital itself, and as a Hollywood premiere is part of the story, Director Frank Strayer decided to take advantage of a real premiere at the noted Grauman's Chinese Theater, which occurred during the filming of the production.

Accordingly a battery of Fox Movietone cameras were added to the usual newsreel instruments that are always present at such affairs, and as Filmland's celebrities arrived they were extensively "shot" together with the leading players in the story, and these scenes were incorporated into the finished picture. Until the premiere of "Let's Go Places" in Hollywood, many of these stars were unaware that they had played impromptu roles.

Joseph Wagstaff and Lola Lane are co-featured with Frank Richardson, Dixie Lee, Sharon Lynn, Walter Catlett, Charles Judels and Ilka Chase in this merry and melodious production. William K. Wells wrote the story and dialog and the catchy musical numbers are the best efforts of four different groups of song-writers, Conrad Mitchell and Gottler, Hanley and Brockman, Little and Burke, and McCarthy and Monaco.—(To be reviewed Monday.)

STATE

The audible screen's greatest pair of sweethearts, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, are again co-starred in "High Society Blues," Fox Movietone musical romance, which opened an engagement at the State theater today.

"High Society Blues" is adapted from a short story by Dana Burnet, which recently appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and details the troubles of a wholesale grocer from a small Iowa town, who sells his business to a chain-store corporation for several millions and then tries to crash the exclusive social set of Westchester County, New York.

Miss Gaynor is the daughter of the socially prominent and wealthy family which controls the chain-store system, while Farrell is the son of the Iowa grocer, addicted to the ukelele.

The Iowans buy an estate right across the road from Janet's family and try to be neighborly, but Janet's mother, who has arranged an engagement between her daughter and a foreign count, snubs the outlanders.

How the Iowa grocer, with his dandeer aroused by an insult to one of his wife's pies, finally brings "high hatted" society to its knees while meantime an absorbing romance blossoms between Janet and Charles, makes one of the most interesting productions of this type yet turned out for the audible screen.

The young stars are surrounded by a cast of unusual strength, including William Collier, Sr., Joyce Compton, Hedda Hooper, Louise Fazenda, Lucien Littlefield and Brandon Hurst.—(To be reviewed Monday.)

TOO MUCH LIME NOT GOOD FOR GRASSY LAWNS

Fertilizer Needed Most, Ohio Report Says.

CHECK RESULTS

Experiments are Made On Various Plots.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 7. — Because the soil of the lawn becomes sour, and moss starts to grow there, is not sufficient reason for putting lime on the lawn. Most lawns in Ohio do not need lime, and its application encourages weeds rather than grass, points out a bulletin issued by the Ohio Agricultural Station of Experimentation.

It is fertilizer, not lime, which the grass usually needs, continues the bulletin. The presence of moss, says the bulletin, in the lawn indicates that the soil is impoverished. Grass endures a far higher degree of acidity in the soil than do moss and weeds. Heavy and repeated applications of lime in excess of the needs of the grass, if properly nourished, simply encourage the growth of weeds.

Two experimental plots at the experiment station were used to check up on these facts during the summer of 1928. One plot was given a treatment of 100 pounds of hydrated lime to each 1,000 square feet. It yielded about 8.5 per cent more grass than another plot which received no treatment at all. A third plot was given 23 pounds of fertilizer in three applications and yielded 91 more per cent grass than the untreated plot, and received no lime at all.

Results of these and scores of similar experiments in the establishment and maintenance of lawns, will be discussed at the second annual Better Lawns day at the experiment station at Wooster June 5. Both city and country dwellers interested in the treatment of their lawns are invited to attend the mass meeting on that date.

Rural districts of Ohio are bearing a disproportionate share of the cost of educating the children of the state in view of the fact that so many of the rural children, after they have reached the economically productive age, go to the cities to work and to use the education that they have acquired in the country. This, at least, is the conclusion reached by H. R. Moore and P. G. Beck of the rural economics department of Ohio State university and the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station.

Moore and Beck have measured the burden in proportion to the tax paying ability of the rural and urban districts of the state, and compared the load carried by each.

"Approximately one half of all the revenue coming from uniform property taxes on the farm property goes to the financing of the service of education," says a pamphlet issued by the two men. "Modern industrial development has resulted in the migration of an increasing percentage of farm born youth into city occupations and residence. A recent study made by this department indicates concretely the volume of this migration. From 1275 rural households studied, 1,600 children migrated when they became adults. Of these, 524, or 34 per cent, remained on the farm, while 1,076, or 66 per cent, went into other occupations, most of them to urban locations. In some sections of the state only 20 per cent became farmers, in other sections the percentage was from 40 to 50. At the same time, 95 per cent of the farm operators included in this study were the sons of farmers. At the same time it is evident that through the migration from rural areas because of changing economic and social conditions there has fallen upon rural schools not only the burden of educating persons who remain in the rural areas, but the burden of training another and larger group that later become urban residents.

In studying the relation between the distribution of population of school age and the distribution of assessed property values in various areas, Moore and Beck found that the property assessed for taxation for each person between the ages of 5 and 17 was $10,246 in urban areas as against $7,337 in rural areas and $9,115 as an average for the entire state.

ARTISTS O. K. U. S. AUDIENCES

PARIS—The American audience is the ideal one for artists, according to Alexandre Bralowsky, well-known pianist, recently returned from the United States.

"Nowhere is in the world," said Mr. Brailowsky, "will one find a more cultivated and enthusiastic audience than in New York City. The people possess sufficient culture to make them understand the value of relaization and effort and they are extremely prompt to show their pleasure. The so-called 'Anglo-Saxon coldness' is a big myth if one is to judge from the audiences I saw assembled in the big American concert halls."

The pianist also added that the place to go to learn music was America and not Europe. He believes that the large element of Latin blood among the Americans has contributed to their important musical ability, as well as to their communicative and warm-hearted character.

Canadians are planning to send foreign trade missions to the Orient and Latin America next winter.

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

CHEVROLET'S
New Service Policy
wins nationwide approval

On January 1st of this year, the Chevrolet Motor Company announced a new service policy—the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced automobile.

Immediately it was greeted with enthusiasm by Chevrolet buyers everywhere—because its many unusual features materially add to the economy and lasting satisfaction of Chevrolet ownership. Briefly, it provides——for free inspection and adjustment at the 500-mile mark, and free inspections every 1000 miles thereafter.

—for free replacement of any material—including both parts and labor—that may prove defective, within the terms of the standard warranty.

—that this replacement will be carried out by any Chevrolet dealer in the United States—regardless of where the owner may have traveled during the warranty period.

Backing this policy is one of the largest service organizations in the automotive industry—consisting of over 10,000 authorized Chevrolet dealer service stations in the United States alone. Come in! Learn all the other reasons why it's wise to choose a Chevrolet Six!

Enduring Beauty and Protection in THIS CAN

HOME—our prize possession—must be kept beautiful and it must be protected from the savage attacks of rain, snow, sleet and sun. Paint, LOWE BROTHERS HIGH STANDARD House Paint, is the material with which to do these two things and do them well.

Each can of HIGH STANDARD contains a full measure of value; it contains a paint made from only the best of materials and by workmen skilled through many years of paint-making experience.

Because it wears so long and looks so nice as long as it lasts, the application of HIGH STANDARD places painting on the investment side.

Truly, the use of HIGH STANDARD does "erase the shadow of time."
